500 & H34RT EM0J15

by Conrad Square

With a fluorescent spray can in his right hand and a stencil in his left, Square's latest exhibition bridges his street art roots with his contemporary studio practice like never before.

In a masterclass of graffiti paint (his term for spray paint made for vandalism), house paint, stencils, large-format print-outs, tape, scalpels, and brushes, Square has learned to embrace every drip, overspray, crooked line, and mistake—stepping away from his usual perfectionist tendencies.

This invigorating body of work has offered comfort as Square navigates a period of change in both his personal life and professional career. It marks a shift toward accepting his current situation and welcoming new relationships and routines, all while reinforcing the deep importance of friends and family.
