NIGHTSHADE

by Zachary Beven

You pick the flower that only blooms at night the one witches smeared on their skin to fly
the one that unspools the world in hallucination
Of course you think
all the same
a threshold, looking left, then right an angel's wing bowed your cheeks flushed
the devil whispering
a way in
a way through a way gone
It tears the veil
what it shows is doubled natural / supernatural
intimacy / violence
beauty / danger
No self-regard
they said you are unnatural so you do the obvious thing press the flower to your tongue Chew
Swallow
